Final Project Topic

My final project design will be called The Iron Index. This website purpose to share any helpful information about writing a book. Whether it's about monsters in fantasy or flying space craft in space. This is the one stop shop of writing ideas. You will be able to go here as a writer and try to find some ideas that you can incorporate into your book or story. We have monster ideas spanning from the wicked witches to the demon lord. This is also a good place for beginners who's trying to find a good idea on how to start a book. We also have a bounty system where writing contest is played every month as a way to help newer writers.

There will be three main features with two sub features. Bounty system will be a main feature this is because it can be very useful to new writers or creators. Pen helper is a main feature that help writers plan their next part of a story and it is based off of a bunch of guess this character systems. The last main feature is the index itself where you can search what this creature or monster are within the database that we have for them. The two sub features are mostly text editor and a word count. These two sub features are useful in writing notes or ideas for your story.

This final project will be a joint project with CIS 244 and CIS 228. I am going to use most of my coding knowledge to make these features of the Iron Index possible.
